Hosting the album release party for your Latin fusion band on Cinco de Mayo seems a little on the nose, but if you're looking to experience south-of-the-border sounds in person Saturday, Enrique Infante's show at Woodlands Tavern is a strong option. The Peruvian-born musician runs the gamut between traditional Latin American sounds and hybrid sounds that summon the ghost of everybody from Santana to Marley. Saturday he'll celebrate his latest release, "Canciones Ajenas."
